The Culinary Historians of Canada (CHC) is an organization that researches, interprets, preserves and celebrates Canada's culinary heritage, which has been shaped by the food traditions of the First Nations peoples and generations of immigrants from all parts of the world. Through programmes, events and publications, CHC educates its members and the public about the foods and beverages of Canada's past. Founded as the Culinary Historians of Ontario in 1994, CHC welcomes new members wherever they live.
